Assistant County Attorney Tenders His Resignation to His Superior Officer.

NO TRUCE; STANDS BY GUNS

Effort Made to Close Up the Breach Is Fruitless-Another Rumpus Over Stockade Policy.

John F. Bowman, assistant county attorney, today tendered his resignation to County Atty. Job P. Lyon, the resignation to take effect at the option of his chief. On account of press ing maters, with which Bowman is most familiar, it is said that he will not sever his connection with the oftice until after Monday.

An effort was made to have the breach closed and a truce declared. Mr. Bowman stood by his guns, however, and refused to recede from the position he had taken that the county had the right to police the city, when the city police department had de-monstrated that it was inefficient and unable to cope with the situation.

The two legal lights held a conference this morning and the situation was thrashed over, but to no avail.

When Mr. Bowman had delivered his final say, County Atty, Lyon said that he had forced the Issue and that he must request his resignation. No soon-er had the request been made than the verbal resignation was made. Mr. Bowman has had almost exclu-

Mr. Bowman has had almost exclusively the handling of the case against Roy Armstrong, negro, charged with the murder of J. J. Brennan, and he will likely remain with the office until the conclusion of the trial of that case, which begins Monday.

DATE FOR SIRMAY HEARING.

Set for Monday Afternoon at the State Prison.

FOOD COMMISSIONER BUSY.

The state food commissioner has jus had the state chemist examine 16 samples of butter representing as many brands, and picked up on the local market. They were found up to the standard, though one sample was a trifle rancid. The commissioner also, in inspecting the candy factories, found in two of them starch used in molding chocolate that had been used over and over again, and swept up from the floor. Sweepings were found in the starch which had been merely sifted the starch which had been merely sitted the starch which had been through a coarse mesh sieve. These candy men will be looked after, The in-spectors are sharp after the local bak-eries, insisting on absolute cleanliness.

B. F. GRANT TALKS ON PROHIBITION

A Large Audience at Meeting Held in Provo Opera House Last Night.

(Special to The News.) Provo, Oct. 22 .- A large audience greeted B. F. Grant in the Opera House, last evening, where he talked on prohibition. There were - many prominent men present, among them Jesse Knight, T. N. Taylor, William M. Roylance, John B. Milner, Alma Greenwood, Andrew B. Morgan and James H. Clark, who were seated on the stage. Thomas N. Taylor officiated as chair man. In introducing Mr. Grant Mr. Taylor stated that Mr. Grant was blowing the same horn that he was blowing last year.

Mr. Grant stated he believed that all his hearers stood on some part of a temperance platform. He believed that if his hearers tried all things and heaf fast to that which was good they would fast to that which was good they would all come to the conclusion that statewide, nation-wide and worfd-wide prohibition was in the air. He announced himself as a Republican prohibitionist, and referred to his own experience as a liquor dealer 30 years ago, and stated that for 30 years he had been fighting the liquor business and felt himself qualified to speak on the question.

The liquor interests of the country had $1,500,000,000 invested, and whenever election time comes on this in-

He believed the people would all say they wanted to blot this monser out; but how to do it—that was the question. Some doubted whether the people of Utah were ripe for prohibition. Dr.

tion. Some doubted whether the people of Utah were ripe for prohibition. Dr. Fuller, who came here two years ago in the interest of the Anti-saloon league, had stated that Utah was ripe for it. Two years ago the prohibitionists went before the legislature and asked for it, "and you all know what we got." We found however, that 75,000 to 80,000 petitioners (8,011 from Utah county), citizens of the state, petitioned for prohibition." He hoped the people of Utah county were still blowing the same horn, although he knew at least one man who two years ago was almost ready to wring his friend's neck for not wanting prohibition, and this year he was almost ready to wring his friend's neck for not wanting prohibition, and this year he was almost ready to wring the same friend's neck for wanting it.

Mr. Grant described the methods of the liquor element in handling primaries and conventions. The local option methods of dealing with the liquor question were illustrated and it was shown that this forced the evils of the liquor traffic on communities which did before the legislature and asked for it liquor traffic on communities which did not want it, because the people of annot want it, because the people of another town permitted the traffic, and made it possible for them to debauch the boys and girls of the town where the people opposed the traffic. Mr. Grant showed that the law aways restricted the individual for the good of all, and a community had no more right to construct a moral case nool at its to construct a moral cess pool at its neighbor's door than an individual had to construct a sewer cess pool near his neighbor's door.

He took the position that the saloon was an outlaw in the community until it is legalized, and prohibition made the traffic an outlaw as it should be.

The objection to prohibition made by some people was that prohibition did not prohibit. He invited any person in the audience to tell the audience of any prohibition did not prohibit. Prohibition did not prohibit—men would drink beer and whisky as long as it was made; but if there was no isaloon the public authorities would have little trouble in faving the responshave little trouble in fixing the responsibility of the sale.

Reference was made to slavery, which was abolished by Abraham Lincoln—a man who held principles above party—and this was held up as an example to be followed in dealing with the liquor question.

The question was asked why, if pro-hibition did not prohibit, the liquor in-terests were spending hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to de-

The revenue question was taken up and it was proved that more money was used in taking care of the men who were ruined by the saloon than who were rained by the saloons that all the revenue paid by saloons in li-censes and taxes. Mr. Grant spoke carnestly of the evil wrought by saloons in the destruction of some of saloons in the destruction of some of the best young men and women of the community, and impoverishing men and women who came directly or indirectly under its baleful influence. He read from sayings of Abraham Lincoln to the effect that the liquor traffic could not be regulated, but must be wiped out; and read from Chief Justice Brewer to the effect that at times principles demanded the sacrifice of party.

Mr. Grant said he had read a slander of the head of the Brigham Young university and he wanted to refute it. It was that the gentleman was going to work against prohibition. Mr. Grant said he did not believe this for he heard the gentleman say that the only way to protect the boys and girls who came to the institution was by prohibition

As parties are like men, some progressive, some not, why not get out from under the party that is not progressing and stand for principle? Moral issues, said the speaker, are signs of progression, and when a party has none such it dies. He referred to the Whig party as dying from such cause.

The subject of prohibition came in for discussion. The inconsistency of the county Republicans was referred to from the fact that candidates were appealing for votes from the fact that the county had declared for state-wide prohibition, while the state had declared for a modified form of local option.

FIND DEFECT IN TITLE.

City Council Is Expected to Remedy It. However.

Further delay in the final acceptance of the new East Side high school site has resulted from the discovery by the board that the 11-acre tract offered by Bothwell & McConaughy, Instead of being a solid tract with the full title in the grantors, consists of two blocks In the grantors, consists of two blocks, a subdivision, with a dedicated street cutting the tract in two. The formal purchase of the ground will not be made until the city, through the council, vacates this dedication. No trouble is expected in this, however.

One important step taken by the board of education at the meeting Friday night was the giving of authority Manner.

Payson, Oct. 21.—The calebration of the first settlement of Payson is proving to be a most enjoyable affair. The festivities began Thursday morning, when a thousand schoolchildren, each with an American flag, attended by Held's band and the three surviving pioneers, Courtland Searl, Andrew Jackson, Sr., and Andrew Jackson, Jr., inaugurated the celebration with a parade, marching through the main streets of Payson to the point on Peteetneet creek, where the first camp of white Utah settlers was pitched on Oct. 20, 1850. After the rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by the band, an address of welcome was made by Mayor Joseph Reese, in which he presented the keys of the city to the Peteetneet Sons and Daughters of Utah Ploneers. President G. Frank Pickering of the society followed with an address of welcome and formally presented the city's keys to the survivors of the days of settlement. Each of the veterans then made a short address, after which they were decorated with roses by Misses Eugenie Pickering, Minnle Curtis and Master Edmond Evans. The schoolchildren rendered "America," and the march was resumed to the Nebo stake tabernacle, where 2,000 people listened to a program, including an address by Bishop J. A. Loveless and a song by the schoolchildren, which was written and composed by Payson talent, Orson P. Huish, J. L. Townsend and William Clayson. Many pastimes were enjoyed during the afternoon, and a feature of the program was a tableau entitled "Payson, 1910," in which Miss Armorei Dixon appeared as "Utah, Queen of the Vest," Miss Myrle Payson as "Payson, 1910," surrounded by a group of Payson's young ladies. SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

One of the pretty weddings of last week was the marriage of Inez Nebeker to Peter G. Burt the ceremony being performed in the temple on Wednesday, Oct. 19, 1910. The reception took place in the evening of the same day at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Nebeker, 41 north Second West street. There were over 100 guests assembled to greet the bride and groom and wish them happiness. The rooms were beautifully piness. The rooms were beautifully decorated with chrysanthenums, roses and cosmos, the color scheme being pink and was carried out with decorations of crepe tissue and maple autumn leaves. During the evening the guests were entertained with vocal and instrumental music. Refreshments were served. One of the amusing scenes of the evening was when the automobile was about to leave the residence to take the resum married counts to the was about to leave the residence to take the young married couple to the depot preparatory to starting on their wedding tour, the car was literally showered with rice, etc., as a token of good luck on their journey.
